LA VELOCIDAD DE LA LUZ (SPANISH EDITION) BY JAVIER CERCAS PDF

Ésta es la historia de una amistad que empieza en 1987, cuando el narrador, un joven aspirante a novelista, viaja a una universidad del Medio Oeste estadounidense y conoce a Rodney Falk, su compañero de despacho, un ex combatiente de Vietnam hurano e inabordable, ferozmente lucido y corroido en secreto por su pasado. Pero esta es también la historia de una experiencia radical en el abismo indescifrable del mal y la culpa, que el propio narrador solo lograra entender y asumir años más tarde, como en una fulguración, cuando conozca el éxito y lo que este tiene de corrupción insidiosa. Para entonces la figura imprecisa de Rodney y su historia devastadora se le acabaran imponiendo con la fuerza de lo necesario, como un emblema de su propia historia, y acaso de la condición humana. Con una escritura de enganosa transparencia y una trama que no da tregua al lector, La velocidad de la luz indaga en nuestra ilimitada capacidad de hacer dano, en la infinita estupidez de la guerra y en la infinita estupidez del éxito, pero sobre todo en el poder definitivo de la literatura para enfrentarse a la realidad y exorcizar sus demonios.

Psychological Masterpiece

By luchadorconan

I read a lot of fiction in Spanish and this, along with Soldados de Salamina, are two of my favorites. The novel is well written and continues to build and build throughout, making you feel as though you've been through something catastrophic by the end. From a psychological standpoint, it's fascinating, up there with Crime and Punishment. I'm from the Midwest, so I found Cercas' depiction of a college town in Illinois that much more interesting. I feel like he really got the culture right, and loved the references to Dylan's "It's alright Ma". I rarely have the urge to contact an author after finishing a novel, but tried to no avail after reading this one.

Cercas's Model

By Melissa Figueroa

This novel can be better understood if we also read Sol de medianoche (Midnight sun) by the Puerto Rican writer Edgardo Rodríguez Juliá. The plots are very similar and Cercas had reviewed Rodríguez Juliá's novel ten years before La velocidad de la luz (The Speed of Light) came to light.

price of war and life

By Carlos Vazquez Quintana

This novel contains apparently some of autobiography and so, mentions sometimes his previous work, "Soldados de Salamina".

Because the protagonist is, more or less, a copy of the author, at first, a young aspirant to writer. At the beginning he works and survives poorly in Barcelona. A teacher and scholar from these university recommends him for a vacancy as Spanish language and literature teacher in a village of the USA near Chicago.

There, his economical situation is better, and he knows the American country and another people, but the most important, which becomes a friend, is Rodney Falk. Rodney, 41 years old, more ten years older than the young Spanish, is an ex - combatant of Vietnam War and prey of terrible sense of guilt owing his war past. He had a brother killed in that war before he decided to change his destination in Vietnam from a business desk to a special hard fighting group. Rodney's father, a widow physician, is a right man, but he doesn't understand fully the troubles of his son, because himself was a soldier during World War II and he thinks Vietnam was a similar war. Perhaps owing to loneliness, Rodney and the author trust one in another. Rodney marries and gets some jobs, but his remorse and feeling of guilt make sterile his efforts. He drinks and has several psychiatric crisis.

Two years later, the author returns to Spain, works hard, writes "Soldados de Salamina", a novel that deals with an episode of Spanish Civil War that becomes a success at the level of Spain. The novel is translated and known also in USA and in the literary world, and after a sort of period of big economical and social recognizing, including some conjugal infidelities, one night after a hard discussion the wife and little child of the author results killed in a car accident, so, he falls in a deep depression and lives isolated for a time, but then, Rodney reappears in travelling to Spain, so the two old friends have an brief encounter in Madrid when finally Rodney tells him his full story and returns to the USA. The end is tragic and the Spanish author returns to the USA when he has a meeting with Rodney's wife and with his old American friends: some have succeeded in life, some not.
