Geyser Creek Middle School's cafeteria sink is clogged, and the smell is . . . well, P-U-trid. Of course, the savvy students in the sixth-grade class know just who can create a fabulous new sink--Florence Waters, who designed the school's OTT (over-the-top) water fountain. But the famous fountain designer (and, more important, their good friend) has gone missing! Undeterred, these kids follow their hearts and noses all the way to China to find Florence . . . and sniff out a few stinkers along the way.

Told in letters, newspaper articles, and BEAN-mails, this story is guaranteed to make you laugh until beans fly out your nose!

Fun and clever sequel

By KidsReads

Kate Klise and M. Sarah Klise have written a fun, clever sequel to their popular middle-grade novel, REGARDING THE FOUNTAIN. We find ourselves once again immersed in a mystery with the Geysers Creek Middle School sixth-grade class in REGARDING THE SINK.

The trouble begins with a clogged cafeteria sink. The smell is just awful and the student body can't stand it much longer. The sixth graders want their old friend, Florence Waters, to design a new sink for them. Florence previously designed a new fountain for their school when the school's drinking fountain sprang a leak. The children have many suggestions for Florence, including a winking sink and a sink with a built-in computer. But all of the letters to Florence go unanswered and the children fear the worst has happened. They then find out that Florence has gone to China to help the endangered Sinkiang Spotted Suckerfish.

The sixth grade class has their work cut out for them. While they are trying to raise money for a class trip to visit Florence, their school lunches are replaced with beans, the price of milk goes through the roof, and AIR-gate Inc. wants to replace rainstorms with man-made rain, which falls only at night. Are the sixth-graders and their patient teacher, Mr. Sam N., up to the challenge of solving these and other mysteries?

This entire story is told through letters, news reports, advertisements and drawings. At first I found this writing style distracting, but once I focused on the story contained in the letters, etc., I thoroughly enjoyed it. Children who are hesitant to read novels with small print and large chunks of text will eat up this book's lively format.

REGARDING THE SINK is a fun read for older elementary-aged students. I intend to pick up other books written by the talented author/illustrator team of Kate Klise and M. Sarah Klise.

Original New Fiction for Middle Readers

By Erika Sorocco

The cafeteria sink at Geysers Creek Middle School is clogged, and the stench arising from the pipes is getting worse and worse every single day. So teacher Sam N.'s sixth-grade class decide to do something about it. They decide to hire their friend, and fountain designer, Florence Waters to design and build an intrepid new sink for the cafeteria. However, the famous designer is missing, so the kids decide to find out where she's disappeared to. With a little research, and an expensive school trip, the sixth-graders learn that Florence is in Sinkiang, China, so that's where they head. However, while there they find many mysterious happenings, such as a company that promises the public that it will only rain at night, their principal's cranky Mother, crooked politicians, and endangered Chinese fish.

Written through newspaper articles, letters, e-mails, drawings, and class reports, this latest effort from the Klise sisters is a must-have. The plot of the story is enjoyable, and will have even the pickiest readers rolling on the floor laughing, while at the same time learning small bits of information about stocks, politics, and inventions. Whether you're a fan of previous books written by Kate Klise and illustrated by M. Sarah Klise, or not, this is a book that everyone will adore, including adults, and older siblings.

As Good as it's Precdecessor

By Tally

I'm in 9th grade and I just got this book for christmas. It had been on my wish list for quite some time. I love all of Kate Klise's books, and this one was no exception. Kate Klise's cleverness, combined with her sister, M. Sarah Klise's, drawings make for one of the best books I have read in a while.

I would reccomend any of Klise's books to children of all ages. It's got everything a great mook should have- beans, cows, crabby old ladies, clogged sinks, and a class field trip to China.
